1 About CERC

The Anti-Corruption Research Centre (CERC) is a Congolese public-interest organisation based in Kinshasa and Bukavu, working with citizens to strengthen integrity, transparency and good governance of public services in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

Since 2017, CERC has trained citizens to monitor public services: schools with EduCheck, health facilities with HealthCheck. Its method relies on verified, published facts and on constructive dialogue with officials until problems are solved.

2 HealthCheck

HealthCheck is CERC's citizen monitoring platform for health facilities. In each health area, CODESA members trained by CERC form a health committee that regularly visits health centres, hospitals, clinics, dispensaries and pharmacies.

Committees, patients, carers and health workers report the problems they see. CERC checks every report before publication; the facility management is informed and asked to act; the committee talks with the managers and confirms the fix on site. Every step is public, without ever publishing a reporter's name or individual medical data.

CERC's approach — CERC identifies and trains CODESA members in each health area. Their health committee monitors health facilities with HealthCheck, reports problems, talks with the facility managers and the health zone, and checks each fix on site. Reports are checked by CERC before publication; reporters' names are never published.

3 Why HealthCheck matters

Ministry of Health

A real-time, verified and geolocated view of service quality in health facilities, to guide inspection, budgets and priorities, and to measure the effect of reforms.

NGOs and technical and financial partners

Field evidence to target interventions, follow the use of support and report results with a resolution rate verified on site.

Civil society

A social accountability tool: open, downloadable data to document advocacy and engage authorities on the basis of facts.

Patients and communities

A protected voice to report illegal fees, medicine stock-outs, poor reception or detention for debt, and the possibility to follow each problem until it is solved.

Health workers

A channel to raise system failures — stock-outs, broken equipment, unpaid salaries — and to show publicly the fixes obtained.
